Mr. Casey,

Here is a copy of today's NSC briefing. I'd also like to ask your assistance on a project I started too low in the bureaucracy..... and now needs priority support, because a potential Congressional schedule has been advanced.

The White House has initiated a request to Speaker O'Neil to have a full closed session of the House to present the Soviet Strategic Defense activities. Our "unclassified" summary of their activities will make a timely addition to that session for the general public.

Richard Leslie also had the idea (since we can't release actual intelligence material) that a carefully constructed model of their Pechora and Krasnaya Radars.... built on a comparable scale to the capital building.... would make a strong visual impression on the congressmen. Further, they could be photographed by newsmen after the session.

It is possible that such a session would be held Friday, if Speaker O'Neill agrees. With your priority it probably still possible to build such models. I would like to suggest the following four:

- Capital — for comparison
- (1) Pechara
 - (2) Hsuanayank and one of the border radar for comparison
 - (3) a terrain model of the possible operational ground-based bases
 - (4) the experimental bases at Song Sangun.

Do you think it can be done?
